Lombardi's journey takes her to the remote rainforests of Borneo, where she witnesses the efforts to save the critically endangered orangutan. She travels to the African savanna, where she learns about the fight to protect lions from poaching and habitat destruction. And she visits the icy shores of the Arctic, where she documents the struggle to save polar bears from the effects of climate change.

Along the way, Lombardi meets a cast of unforgettable characters, from the dedicated scientists who have spent their lives studying these animals to the local communities who are working to protect their habitats. She learns about the cutting-edge technologies that are being used to track and monitor endangered species, and she witnesses the heartbreak of losing animals to extinction.

But Field Notes From The Race To Save Our Endangered Relatives is not just a story of loss. It is also a story of hope and resilience. Lombardi shows us that even in the face of overwhelming odds, there are people who are dedicated to saving our planet's most vulnerable creatures. These are the people who are giving us a fighting chance to create a future where all species can thrive.
