In Heroes on the Frontline, award-winning journalist and military historian David Martin brings together a collection of firsthand accounts from these extraordinary individuals. These stories, drawn from interviews with soldiers, marines, airmen, and special forces operators, offer a rare glimpse into the world of frontline combat.

From the beaches of Normandy to the mountains of Afghanistan, from the jungles of Vietnam to the deserts of Iraq, Heroes on the Frontline tells the stories of soldiers who have fought and died for their country. These are stories of valor, sacrifice, and courage, stories that will stay with you long after you finish reading them.

Inside the Book

Heroes on the Frontline is divided into four sections, each of which focuses on a different aspect of frontline combat.

- Section 1: The Infantryman

This section tells the stories of infantrymen, the backbone of any army. These are the soldiers who fight on the ground, in the thick of the fighting. They are the ones who face the enemy face-to-face, and who are often called upon to make the ultimate sacrifice.

- Section 2: The Airman

This section tells the stories of airmen, the men and women who fly planes and helicopters in support of ground troops. These are the pilots who risk their lives to deliver supplies, evacuate wounded soldiers, and carry out airstrikes on enemy targets.

- Section 3: The Special Forces Operator

This section tells the stories of special forces operators, the elite soldiers who are trained to carry out the most dangerous and challenging missions. These are the men and women who are sent behind enemy lines to gather intelligence, sabotage enemy operations, and rescue hostages.

- Section 4: The Marine

This section tells the stories of marines, the amphibious assault troops who are trained to fight on land, sea, and air. These are the marines who stormed the beaches of Iwo Jima, fought in the jungles of Vietnam, and are currently deployed in the Middle East.
