Miles was sent to Europe in 1942. He flew P-51 Mustang fighters, and he quickly became one of the most successful American fighter pilots in the war. He shot down 15 enemy aircraft, and he was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross and the Silver Star.

In 1944, Miles was shot down over France. He was captured by the Germans and held as a prisoner of war. He escaped from prison camp several times, but he was always recaptured. Finally, in 1945, he was liberated by the Allied forces.

After the war, Miles returned to the United States. He wrote a book about his experiences, called One Man War. He also worked as a test pilot and an airline pilot. He died in 2000 at the age of 84.

William Miles was a true American hero. He was a brave and determined fighter, and he never gave up on his dream of fighting for freedom.
