

Parks For The People: A Transformative Vision for Public Spaces

A vibrant and inclusive public park system is an essential part of any thriving city. It provides a place for people to gather, connect with nature, and enjoy a variety of recreational activities. Parks also play a vital role in promoting physical and mental health, as well as reducing crime and improving air quality.

In recognition of the importance of parks, the City of Boston held a public meeting at Faneuil Hall on June 19th, 2023. The meeting brought together over 100 residents, community leaders, and elected officials to discuss the future of Boston's parks and open spaces. The meeting was part of a larger effort by the city to develop a comprehensive plan for parks and open spaces that will guide decision-making for the next decade.

Key Findings

The public meeting on Parks for the People generated a number of key findings. These findings include:

- There is a strong desire for more parks and open spaces in Boston. Residents want to see parks that are accessible, safe, and offer a variety of amenities.
- There is a need for more investment in parks and open spaces. The city needs to increase its funding for parks maintenance, renovation, and new park development.
- There is a need for better coordination between the city and other stakeholders in the park system. The city needs to work with community groups, non-profits, and developers to create a more cohesive and equitable park system.

Next Steps

The City of Boston is committed to taking the next steps to implement the findings of the public meeting on Parks for the People. These steps include:

- Developing a comprehensive plan for parks and open spaces. The plan will identify goals, objectives, and strategies for improving the park system over the next decade.
- Increasing investment in parks and open spaces. The city will work to identify new funding sources and explore innovative ways to finance park improvements.
- Improving coordination between the city and other stakeholders in the park system. The city will establish a new Parks Advisory Council to advise the Mayor and City Council on park-related matters.

The public meeting on Parks for the People was a success. The meeting brought together a diverse group of stakeholders to discuss the future of Boston's parks and open spaces. The findings of the meeting will help inform the city's decision-making process as it develops a comprehensive plan for parks and open spaces.

The City of Boston is committed to creating a park system that is accessible, safe, and welcoming to all residents. With the help of the public, the city can create a park system that is a source of pride for the community and a destination for people of all ages.
