The journal was founded in 1981 by Stanley Cavell and John McDowell. It is currently edited by Richard Eldridge, David Velleman, and Martha Nussbaum. The journal is published annually by Oxford University Press.

Philosophical Perspectives has published essays by some of the most distinguished philosophers and literary critics in the world, including W.H.

Auden, J.L. Austin, Jacques Derrida, Michel Foucault, Jürgen Habermas, Martin Heidegger, Hans-Georg Gadamer, Charles Taylor, and Slavoj Žižek.

The journal is divided into two sections: "Essays" and "Reviews". The "Essays" section publishes original essays on all aspects of philosophy and literature. The "Reviews" section publishes reviews of recent books on philosophy and literature. The journal also publishes occasional symposia on topics of current interest.

Philosophical Perspectives is a valuable resource for scholars and students of philosophy and literature. The journal provides a forum for the exchange of ideas between philosophers and literary critics, and it helps to promote the development of new scholarship in the field.

Call for Submissions

Philosophical Perspectives: Oxford Studies in Philosophy and Literature invites submissions of original essays on all aspects of philosophy and literature. Essays should be between 6,000 and 8,000 words in length, and they should be prepared for blind review. Submissions should be sent to the editors at philosophicalperspectives@oup.com.
